Electrician is coming Thursday to begin work. Are you mailing Jackie the Notice and New Order or emailing to her.
She's lining up a contractor too.
If she wants the cover over the back of the garage, where can she get a Permit? I'll help with that. At this point it will be less expensive than buying a tough shed.

Paul, will you be sending Ms. Baritell the owner a formal letter on City letterhead with this list so she can start strategizing work on these issues? We're talking about a lot of work and expense. Electrician is still the priority to get out there.

Karin,
The electrical issues that I had sent over were items that needed to be corrected immediately so power will not be shut off at the dwelling. Normally when we see that the electrical panel has been altered, we shut off power immediately. But knowing Jackie is in the house, and with her conditions, we left the power on and let her know it had to be repaired or power would be shut off.
I just wanted to send over the immediate repairs needed to not confuse you, but there are other concerns that need to be addressed. I have attached pictures of other items.
In the pictures I show there is an area in the garage where the exterior wall was modified to add extra square footage to the garage, the work shop area can not be attached to the garage, electrical has been added throughout the work shop, There are signs of dry-rot on the East side of her house, The washer and dryer in the backyard has added electrical and gas lines, etc.

I have been getting referrals for electricians to come and look at the work to be done and get estimates. Jackie would like this resolved so she can go forward with the hearings to plead her case for a reduction of fees and she understands that can't be done until you have signed off with the inspection.
With that being said, can you please confirm that the electrical issues depicted in the photos represent the complete list of ALL required corrections in order to clear the entire case. Once you confirm, we will have a certified licensed electrician make the corrections as soon as possible and then contact you to schedule a re-inspection to close the case. Thank you.

Karin,
I have attached a couple pictures of electrical violations. If you would like me to meet with the electrician onsite, I can.

Yesterday talking with our principle and owner of property, he will allow the electrical work to be done with out permits due to the danger of fire at the dwelling, but would still like me to inspect after the work is done.

I have a certified electrician to look at Jackie's electrical unit. He needs more info on what needs to be done before he goes to her house.

We can have you and Doug come over next week for a backyard inspection.
It is our understanding this is to see if there has been a shed or building added to the property (which in Ms. Baritell's case, there is not). Also, you noted checking for electrical wires and power strips.
We aren't available Monday or Friday and not too early in the morning.
Let me know so I can make arrangements with her and her caregiver to be there.
